APPEAL FOR HELP: SUPPORT FOR NADIIA HAVRYLENKO AND FAMILY

Dear Friends, Parishioners, and Supporters,

We are reaching out to you with a heartfelt request for help for Nadiia Havrylenko, a young mother in her thirties, and her family.

Nadiia and her husband Vasyl arrived in Kirkland Lake from Ukraine in 2022 with their four children, seeking safety and a new beginning. In 2023, their family was blessed with the birth of their fifth child, Demian. Since their arrival, they have become a beloved part of the St. Vladimir Ukrainian Catholic Church community. Nadiia shares her beautiful voice in the church choir, and her children faithfully serve as altar servers.

For the past few years, the Havrylenko family has built their life in Kirkland Lake—Vasyl works locally, and the children attend school. They have been warmly received by our parish and town, and in turn, they have enriched our community with their faith, kindness, and dedication.

However, two weeks ago, Nadiia received the devastating diagnosis of a brain tumor. She is now undergoing further medical testing and has been referred to Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto for consultations on October 31, 2025 and then she will find out about the surgery.

This sudden and serious situation has placed a heavy emotional and financial burden on the family. Nadiia will require travel to and from Toronto, accommodation during her pre- and post-operative care, and assistance with other related expenses that are beyond the family's means.

We appeal to you for your prayers, generosity, and financial support to help the Havrylenko family through this difficult time. Every contribution—no matter the amount—will help ease their financial strain and allow them to focus on Nadiia's recovery.

Donations can be made to St. Mary's Ukrainian Catholic Church by e-transfer stmaryssudbury@yahoo.ca or cheque 40 Notre Dame Ave. Sudbury, ON, P3C 5K2, indicating "For Nadiia Havrylenko Fund" in the message or memo line.

Together, let us show the Havrylenko family that they are not alone, and that our community stands beside them in faith, love, and hope.

With gratitude and prayer,

Fr. Petro (Peter) Bodnar

Prayer shawl by Pegge Bernecker

When our sixteen-year-old son, Justin, died by suicide... unexpectedly, with no warning... I slumped into an intense period of grief.

One long, gloomy February day, in the depths of my inconsolable suffering and angst, I opened a gift from Mary Jo, a friend in Denver. Inside I found a loosely knitted yarn in the colour of tangerines, tied with long fringe. A prayer shawl. I stood in my kitchen and began to weep, amazed at how the Spirit of God consoles. I had no idea what a prayer shawl was, or that an entire growing ministry existed. Included in the gift bag was a card and "Prayer of Comfort" blessing written by Cathleen O'Meara Murtha, D.W. I knew Cathleen! Wrapped by the embrace of orange knitted prayers from Mary Jo, I read a blessing from Cathy, my friend from Connecticut. The knitted love from my Presbyterian friend and a Catholic religious sister who did not know each other wove an embrace of love wrapping me tight, offering me hope.

A few weeks later, a friend showed up at my doorstep unexpectedly, on a day when my grief seemed beyond measure. She gifted me with her presence... and a second prayer shawl. This one was pure white, and large enough to hide or swathe me completely in a pure soft embrace. Completely different from the tangerine shawl, this was a baptismal blanket to remind me that the waters of baptism bring new life and resurrection from the dead.

Not long after that, I sat in the Denver airport on my way to California. My travelling companion met me at the airport and presented me with a package. Inside the iridescent paper was a third shawl, knitted by a friend in Indiana. Its royal blue and triangular shape had shimmering strands of pink, white, silver and turquoise tied throughout the shawl and fringe. Ruth wrote in the card that it was the first prayer shawl she had ever knitted. Furthermore, within a few weeks, she would begin a prayer shawl knitting ministry in her church. Wrapped in the royal blue threads, I knew the broad deep mystery of God's mission for our lives.

In August, a large parcel arrived in the mailbox. I immediately recognized the distinctive handwriting of Sarah, a former student during my many years of working in campus ministry. Curious, I stood at my kitchen island and unwrapped the paper to discover a large gold and white checkered box, tied shut with a white ribbon. Words peppered the box lid: share, hope, wish, enjoy.

Tentatively I untied the bow and gasped with the dawning comprehension. Midnight blue yarn greeted my hands as I lifted a six-foot-long prayer shawl from the box and encircled my shoulders. Medallions, pins, and buttons were tied with the fringe. My fingers traced crosses of all sizes and shapes, shells, a ceramic rose, worn holy medals, angel pins, and even a fishing lure.

Looking back into the box, I saw a colourful piece of paper adorned with butterflies. In handwritten blue ink was a list twenty names from young adults I knew well. All were former students I had served, played, prayed with who now lived in cities throughout the United States and as far away as the Philippines and New Zealand. Beside each person's name was a description of the charm and prayer that they had contributed to the prayer shawl, each an offering of healing, hope, and loving compassion.

These young adults had all known our son. In fact, many had watched him grow through his earlier years with us. Justin had loved them, calling them his "adopted" brothers and sisters from the church. Now, twenty of them wrapped my grief and loneliness, bestowing on me one thousand-fold the love I had once given them. This prayer shawl spoke to me of boundless grace and a multitude of small acts of sacrifice and kindness that bind us together.

I know that in time I will learn to knit and pray my appreciation, love, and compassion into prayer shawls for others who suffer unexpected grief. Threads of belonging that weave us together will continue to knit themselves into homes and hearts, offering whatever each recipient most needs and longs for, bringing courage, consolation, healing, and a deep acknowledgement of the interwoven nature of God.

Have a very blessed week everyone!!
